SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 11.
From London Yesterday's News.
The Atlantic Telegraph is now in operation. We have seen the mariners of London yesterday, who were the first to receive the news from New York by way of their own country. Not a word of doubt, except a somewhat exaggerated one of the news, and that we were so close as the line is put in regular communication.

The dispatch is brief, but it is of important intelligence that it is the first time France has communicated with the United States by the terms of the Convention of 1866. The Chinese Empire is thrown open to all foreign powers, and the Chinese Government has agreed to allow the United States to send a naval force to the coast of China, and to permit the United States to send a naval force to the coast of China, and to permit the United States to send a naval force to the coast of China.

This is one of the most important events of the year. The concession of ports to the United States is a great step towards the opening of the Chinese Empire to the United States.

the Chinese good faith, implies an abandonment of isolation which has been its policy for thousands of years, and that vast country, with its 450 millions of people, to be able to live the civilized life of the west, the way is the same. Obstacles will no doubt be met, but the full realization of the hope stipulated for, by Chinese or the "Brother of the Sun" will win "outside barbarians" with whom entered into treaty are no longer "barbarians" as they will be as prompt as the conditions of the compact will be in their measures to bring the advisers to terms.

The unexpected conclusion of the war might well lead the moral majority to another bombshell and bayonet, after all, necessary rough must prepare the way for the gentler Christian civilization. It is very curious, whatever may be our ethical subject, that by no other means has the position of China been so improved, as by these commercial and friendly with the rest of mankind that the welfare of all demands. John Adams was of this opinion when he was waging the opium war with China, and he shocked the moral sense of the country by defending her course in a speech before the House of Representatives, of which he was then a member. England had been pardoned for seeking, in behalf of her civilization, to break up the isolationist Chinese system, but nothing could shake the right-thinking men with her attempt to poison the drug down the throats of the Chinese people in defiance of the will of their government and on this point public opinion has

Douglas and Nullification
Do not fail to read the article from our field correspondent, on the second instant Nullification upon Douglas that the little dodger will find it impossible to escape from it.

A Chance for Douglas.

CHICAGO, August 10.

Editors Press and Tribune:
It has been proposed in Boston, N. Y. and many other places, and adopted on Wednesday next, 1st September, a good day, to celebrate the success of what I admit to be the greatest scientific exploit of the age—the laying, in the mighty deep, of the great cable. I have not, as yet, seen the cable.

I would suggest that business be suspended on the last of September, in all cities, more or less, participate in the day. And, as I feel a desire to be the workman, I hope that persons and tradesmen will not only allow payless liberty on that day, but will pay the day's pay, thus proving their high station and gratitude to the "Giver of gifts" for so inestimable a boon as the cable.

ROMANUS

REMARKS—The people of Chicago have had two celebrations of the successful cable, and we suspect they consider quite sufficient.

the occasion. The aims of the league "D. C." and the other perky of the Administration were laid up in the strongest light to the eyes of all present. The speaker made a series of all powerful denunciations of the administration resulting that before him stood a single man which might well have been a giant. He was a man of a very simple, and no one wondered that such a man should be so late practiced in the art of speaking. His defeat among a less intelligent people.

Mr. Blair concluded, Judge T. M. Blair said, and vociferous cheering followed. The speaker made a series of all powerful denunciations of the administration resulting that before him stood a single man which might well have been a giant. He was a man of a very simple, and no one wondered that such a man should be so late practiced in the art of speaking. His defeat among a less intelligent people.

forced testimony enough in the case to have sent a man to the Federal penitentiary for 10 years. His statements were denied, and the Federal government was left with no evidence excepting the testimony in the infernal plot, the testimony of the Federal grand jury, by the record, second, by the testimony of his own counsel and third, by Douglas's own testimony. The Federal government, with his own statements, he probably examined in all his cases and invited all who had a doubt to examine it for themselves. The audience were sure that the Federal government was not going to overburden testimony, but there was a record, about which there could be no dispute, that George Trumbull, in 1840, in fact, asked the Federal grand jury for sufficient evidence in a capital case, a man's "last response" was heard, and that the jury was not to move before them or to hear the
